The Scottish Parliament is holding a series of public meetings across the Western Isles in February.

These free information sessions are open to anyone keen to learn more about how the Parliament works and how to bring local issues to the attention of MSPs and the Parliament.

There will be a special focus on the Parliament's public petitions process. The Parliament's Public Petitions Committee will meet in Stornoway on March 15th and so these sessions will be of particular interest to anyone interested in submitting a petition.

Places are limited and must be confirmed in advance.
